ArchPoint Consulting Strengthens Its Talent Management Practice

April 28, 2008 – ArchPoint Consulting welcomes Julie Redfield as a new Partner. Julie has extensive experience in change leadership, executive coaching, facilitation, organization design and talent management. Before joining ArchPoint Consulting, she was the Vice President of Talent and Organization Design for Diageo North America for 7 years where she managed the Seagram's integration, re-designed the National Accounts Organization and designed and embedded a new long term talent strategy for all North American businesses across Beer, Wine and Spirits. She has also worked for PriceWaterhouseCoopers, KPMG and Deloitte Touche where she led change efforts for clients including Disney CPG and Quantum.

With ArchPoint, Julie will be working across three practice areas – Change Management, Organization Design & Talent Management. Julie will be working with our clients on large-scale change projects, leadership development & coaching, HR effectiveness and talent management. Because of Julie's background, she will also be involved in the talent management and organization change elements of ArchPoint's M&A integration applications.

"The ArchPoint team is very excited to welcome Julie into the practice. She brings a wealth of experience in the areas of Talent Management, Organization Design and M&A Integration. Julie will be instrumental in expanding the practice's Human Resource allocations and solutions" says Richard Spoon, Managing Director of ArchPoint.

Julie lived in London for 18 years and has also lived and worked in France and the West Indies. She earned her MBA from the University of Southern California where she received a Presidential Fellowship. Julie resides White Plains, New York with her family.
